No, there is not a statewide workplace standards board or one called “Wage and Workplace Standards Council.”

For wage and hour standards, the Minnesota Legislature sets them in statute and the Minnesota Department of Labor and Industry can promulgate rules.

For workplace safety and health standards, it is the same. The state legislature is responsible for the Minnesota Occupational Safety and Health (OSHA) statutes and the Minnesota Department of Labor and Industry can adopt rules.